Cajun-themed restaurant prepping to serve up 'best on the street' cuisine

With an eye on providing sit-down dining and a bit more economic rejuvenation to downtown Seguin, an investment group has plans for bringing businesses into the Park Plaza Seguin building.

The Nolte Street Collective recently announced intentions to locate a restaurant called Voodoo Daddy's Steam Kitchen into the historic building. Along with the New Orleans-style steam kitchen restaurant, the group intends even more for the space, said John Verhelst, one of the owners. Read More

San Antonio Economic Indicators

Growth in the San Antonio Business-Cycle Index slowed sharply in July as the number of new cases of COVID-19 increased significantly between mid-June and mid-July. While the unemployment rate declined slightly, jobs fell. Local consumer spending also slipped from mid-June to mid-July but has improved since then as the number of new cases of COVID-19 has fallen. Home sales improved in July, and stock prices of San Antonio-based companies increased over the four weeks ending Aug. 21. Read More

Recovery Continues in Texas Manufacturing

Texas factory activity expanded in August for the third month in a row following a record contraction in the spring after the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic, according to business executives responding to the Texas Manufacturing Outlook Survey. The production index, a key measure of state manufacturing conditions, came in at 13.1, down slightly from July but still indicative of moderate growth. Read More
